TRADE BRISK IN ALL LINES In Financial and Inudstrial Branches.

Gratifying Stability is Apparent

Collections Reported Better Than for Some Time Past-Sharp Advances in Leather.

The financial situation still continues satisfactory. Everything is reported running along safely and conservatively. It is considered rather a matter of felicitation that since the election the business part of the country has not become unduly exieted, and plunged into reckless speculation, but is inclined take a sane and healthy view of the situation; also, to show that changes for the better shall come in natural ways, and be permanent rather than be fitful and uncertain. The probability is, there is still quite a large margin between values of stocks and bonds now and what they will be one year from now; and the fact that the best securities appreciate slowly, speaks well for the stability of the business situation. Labor is being re-employed, mills are starting up, and industries are pushed along careful and conmills are starting up, and industries are pushed along careful and conserative lines. And while the wheel of progress may not roll on as fast as some people would like, yet they are moving as fast as prudence would dictate. It must be apparent that the pace the country was moving kept up indefinitely. It is to be hoped that a lesson has been learned from the lint too great haste to travel toward the prosperity goal. The best interest of any country is subserved by its business interests moving slowly, yet safely and conseratively. Nothing is to be so much dreaded as undue haste to be so much dreaded as undue haste to promote business or business inter-prises. When it is considered that the wealth of the country was doubled in a few years, we can clearly see that to continue at such a pace indefinitely would lead to extravagance to an undue accumulation of wealth threatening the stability of business, as well as the safety of political interests. The two should go hand in hand along cautious lines and every good tious lines, and every good citizens should exercise every effort to preserve the interests of the country from undue excitement and unhealthy

LOCAL CONDITIONS.

Locally, business matters are in a gratifying condition. It is a marvel the number of new buildings erected in Salt Lake the current year, both the individual and apartment houses, and what is also ag reat marvel is where the people come from to occupy them, for it seems they are filled up as fast as built—in fact before they are built, as may be instanced in one apartment house on South Temple street where tenants have moved in before the building is finished. The farmer has gathered excellent crops, and received excellent prices for them, which places him in the forefront of prosperity. COMMENT BY CLEWS, The Salt Lake public will be interested in the following railroad com-ment of recent date from Henry Clews: "The stock market suffered some what from a reaction, partly be-cause the Harriman lines failed to do what was expected by raising Union Pacific's dividend and providing for retirement of Southern Pacific preferred. The market really took these disappointments more seriously than was justified. The truth is that stocks had reached a level that made profit-taking exceedingly tempting and the Harriman meetings simply marked the turn which had been much delayed. Stocks are now being quietly distributed, and care should be exercised in all purchases. A very hopeful tone, however, pervades the entire market, which is entirely justified by improvement in business onditions and by the better railroad outlook. Railroad traffic is steadily re-covering, and gross earnings for Octo-Ler thus far reported show a decreas of less than 4 per cent compared with 5 per cent in eptember and 12 to 23 per cent in the previous months of the current year. November returns will be much more satisfactory as to gross earnings, for traffic will shortly return to the normal in volume; in fact, has already done so on some lines. When lessened expenses and better rates are taken into consideration, it will be seen taken into consideration, it will be seen that the railroad outlook is really exceptionally promising. This fact and the cheapness of money chiefly account for the present high level of stocks; and no material recession can be expected until underlying conditions change. While the present optimistic state of feeling lasts holders are reluct-

HARDWARE.

The hardware trade reports with a pardonable show of felicitation that collections continue good, while the copper market indicates a sharp advance, on account of the increasing demand, particularly sheet copper, copper rivets and burrs, and copper sundries generally. Future sales have increased for steel goods; and to the surprise of the jobbing and wholesale trade, retailers are ordering spring goods in selzeable quantities, such as grander forks been lawn mowers ruber. goods in seizeable quantities, such as garden forks, hoes, lawn mowers, rubber hose, etc., as the retail trade has confidence in the future, due to the satisfactory outcome of the recent elections, and feel sure of a good, steady spring trade. Consequently jobbers are placing orders with manufacturers in the east in increasing facturers in the east in increasing numbers. Contractors are reported as buying heavily of machinery to be used in their work, while builders hardware is going out at as lively a rate as ever.

LUMBER.

The lumber trade reports no change of note from last week's status, further than a promised stiffening of prices, indicating the near approach of a rise on account of the big demand for pine and fir lumbers due to the steadi-ly increasing building boom. It is estimated that office buildings, apartments and other engineering structures can now be erected at a cost of 10 per cent less than a year or two ago. Steel, lumber and bricks each having undergone considerable declines. Wages have not been reduced, but labor is in nave not been reduced, but habor is in a much more rational spirit than form-erly and its efficiency is undoubtedly better. Some idea of the increased ac-tivity in building is obtained from the regular trade authorities, which show that building expenditures in 35 lead-ing cities during October were nearly 1997; while the increase in Greater New York in the same period was as much as 76 per cent. This comparison is made with a time when depression was beginning in the building trades, but had not reached its climax trades, but had not reached its climax by any means; and the figures just quoted show a surprising revival in an important industry, foreshadowing a growing demand for steel and all other building materials.

The lumber trade, however, reports the scarcity of cars growing worse rather than better, so that shipments from the Sound country are becoming more and more uncertain.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS. The wholesale dry goods trade reports n stendily good week, shipping out winter goods in response to re-orders and orders for filling in, with a prom-isel advance for spring cottons. There are more dress good orders in the general trade, the call being for darker shades as spring leaders, and new and delicate colors for this winter. There is a stronger demand for spot delivery goods in woolen mixtures and mani-pulated fabrics in the low medium ranges. These goods are needed by local retailers. On cotton warp dress fabrics there have been advances of late, and wholesalers are taking on more goods so as to be ready with am-ple stocks for spring. Traveling men ple stocks for spring. RETAIL DRY GOODS.

The retail dry goods trade reports things a little slow in some lines, but on the whole very fair. At the slik counters goods of beautiful sunset patcounters goods of heathful sunset patterns are noticed, particularly those in Persian patterns. Lovely crepe du chenes are proving good sellers, for scarfs largely. Satins continue to be called for in blues, but not much in browns. Linens are quiet, without the usual Thanksgiving rush of previous years. There is a noticeable vious years. There is a noticeable call for goods carrying much needle work and embroideries, also pyro-graphics. It is quiet in shoes, likewise millinery, because of the pre-valing mild weather. The clerks of the various dry goods stores do wish the ladies would attend to their shopping more during the early hours. For from three to four hours in the day, there is nothing doing, and then in the afternoon, there is a great rush, with purchasers complaining because there are not enough clerks to wait on them. The leather market is stiffening up worse than ever. The trades papers now been put squarely up to the shoe manufacturers, and most of them have their men on the road with samples of goods, with urgent instructions to get higher prices than have ruled for a year past. The firmness in leather and the advances that have already been established in both upper and sol leather grades, make it necessary that shees should bring more money. This is the task set for manufacturers and salesmen, and one that they cannot shirk. Even those that have been most bearish an the situation have been oblided to raise their selling prices. obliged to raise their selling prices onlight to raise their seiling prices, though maintaining that the position of the hide and leather markets is largely an artificial one, the upward movement having been due to manipulation rather that to actual conditions.
